Miss Elaine Torrance Weds in Calgary

Miss Patricia Elaine Torrance chose her parents' 30th wedding anniversary for her recent marriage at Wesley United Church, Calgary, to Mr. William Stewart Douglas. Baskets of gladioli banked the altar at the afternoon ceremony for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Torrance of Carbon and the son of Mr. J. Marshall Douglas and the late Mrs. Douglas of Lacombe. Rev. Malcolm Galbraith read the nuptial service.

Escorted to the altar by her father, the bride was gowned in ice pink satin styled with a yoke of net trimmed with Chantilly lace which extended in a panel to the hem of a train-length skirt. A trailing veil of matching illusion net misted from her lace headdress and fell in folds over her gown. Her bridal bouquet was a shower of pink Sweetheart roses mingled with stephanotis and her only jewelry was a pair of pearl earrings, the gift of the bridegroom.

As her sister's maid of honor, Miss Marion Torrance wore a gown of Swiss embroidered organza with matching mittens and a poke bonnet tied with mauve velvet streamers. She carried a straw basket filled with a cascade arrangement of pink and mauve sweet peas and white marguerites. Miss Marilyn Hay, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid, and wore a gown of blending pink identical in mode to that of the senior attendant. She also wore a poke bonnet and carried a basket of flowers.

Mr. N. C. Brown was groomsmen and the guests were ushered to their places by Mr. William K. Hay, Mr. Fred Stewart and Mr. Donald W. Hay. Mr. Harold Ramsay played the wedding music and Mr. N. Ralph Peacock sang "The Lord's Prayer" before the ceremony and "Through the Years" during the signing of the register.

The wedding reception was held in the Sun room of the Paliser hotel where the toast to the bride was proposed by Dr. A. M. Torrance of Harpersville; N. Y., uncle of the bride. The bridal couple left later on a honeymoon trip to Waterton Lakes and points in the United States, the bride traveling in a mushroom pink suit and coat with navy accessories. A brown squirrel neckpiece and a corsage of gardenias and pink Sweetheart roses completed her ensemble.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Douglas will make their home in Lacombe.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Snell, Mr. and Mrs. Bud Anderson and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Brickman were Pine Lake visitors for three days last week.

The village council meeting has been postponed and will be held Monday evening, July 16.

Dr. and Mrs. McFarlane returned Monday from an extended vacation at Alberta points. Dr. McFarlane announces new office hours in an advertisement on page 8 of this issue.

WHY DROWN?

By J. E. Trevena, Former Saskatchewan
One Mile Swimming Champion

Most of us consider that a group of from forty to fifty people is quite a sizeable gathering. If an entire group such as this was to meet a sudden death by drowning, the event would be no less than a national tragedy. Everyone will agree to this. And yet, every year, in our Province of Saskatchewan, a group of from forty to fifty people meet an untimely death by drowning. Because these sad events usually occur one at a time, they are not headlined in our newspapers as they would had they occurred all at once, but nevertheless, it is true that from forty to fifty people die each year in Saskatchewan through drowning.

In Canada, our highway fatalities are approximately 1,500 per year. Most people consider this to be an alarming figure, and so it is. On the other hand, our national drownings each year total over 1,000. When you consider that most of us ride in cars more often, and for longer periods than we go swimming, it becomes obvious that our drowning accident figure is more appalling than the figure for our highway fatalities.

One In Ten

Surveys in Saskatchewan indicate that less than ten per cent. of our population is capable of swimming even a few feet to safety. Therefore, when ten people gather at a beach or other waterside places to go wading, swimming, or boating, we can expect to find only one of the number capable of swimming a short distance to save his own life, and the chances are slim that he or she would be capable of assisting anyone else. In other words, the average Saskatchewan dweller who bathes or boats in unsupervised places immediately becomes a very poor insurance risk.

A study of the cause of drowning accidents shows that each year drowning claims further victims through the same means—non-swimmers using boats and canoes; swimming alone; waders stepping into deep holes, and so on. The simple little rules of water safety which every one should know are being ignored and the results are disastrous. Only too often do we see young men, whom a pair of swimming trunks has transformed into Tarzans, leaving common sense ashore and dashing into the water. Urged on by the exhilaration of the water, and ignoring every water safety rule, they proceed to carry out every kind of dare and endeavor to outdo each other in physical prowess until, alas, one or more of them becomes a drowning victim and gets lilies on his chest from his mourners instead of pats on the back from his friends, whom, we hope, have at last learned a lesson.

The Rules:

The rules of water safety are nearly all so simple that common sense should suggest most of them to us. Surely everyone knows that stomach cramps, which render a victim helpless, are liable to strike those who go swimming sooner than two hours after a heavy meal.

Non-swimmers, common sense suggests, should not go wading without a competent swimmer immediately at hand and on the alert. A non-swimmer needs only to step into a hole to find himself beyond his depth and helpless. Non-swimmers should admit to themselves, too, that because they cannot swim they will not be safe in a small boat or canoe, even with a good swimmer along with them. Handling these boats is an art and a person unable to swim is not likely to have sufficient knowledge of water safety and mastery to permit the safe handling of such craft. If you are a person in this category, or even if you can swim, don't try to change places in a boat or canoe, and do keep your weight below the waterline in a canoe by kneeling on the bottom. The cross pieces in a canoe were never intended as seats although the uninitiated persist in using them for such thus creating a top-heavy canoe that needs little more than a ripple on the water or a sneeze by one of the paddlers to cause an upset.

All of this sounds pretty bad for the non-swimmer. And so it should be, for learning to swim is so easy and so simple that few have an excuse for not knowing how. So many people spend summer after summer wishing they could swim—and the strange part of it is, they can! And so can you!!!

Learn Now!

At many of our summer resorts in Saskatchewan, volunteer instructors, expertly trained by the Canadian Red Cross Society, will be on duty during the vacation months, eager to instruct would-be swimmers, young and old. Under the direction of these competent instructors, you will probably find, to your amazement, that it will take you longer to change your clothes and put on your bathing suit than it takes to learn to float! And it will cost you nothing!

Common Sense

All persons who are able to swim should carefully guard against overestimating their abilities. A person, no matter how strong a swimmer, should never go swimming alone. Even with a companion, it is wise to stay close to shore. On long swims, common sense demands that swimmers be accompanied by a boat—and there's that word again—"common sense". Pages and pages could be written explaining why these rules should be followed, and indicating tragedies caused by the ignorance of them; authorities on the subject will impress upon you just how true they are and probably add more. Be wise, then, learn these rules well, and whenever you go swimming (never alone and not sooner than two hours after a heavy meal, etc.) TAKE YOUR COMMON SENSES WITH YOU!

The Red Cross will supply freely on request additional information on water safety and how to learn to swim, how to apply Artificial Respiration, and, if you are a boat owner, ask the Red Cross for a waterproof transfer to affix to your boat. The transfer advises all passengers to "Hang On" in case of an upset.

The Red Cross also publish a handbook on Swimming and Water Safety. This book is the only one of its kind available and is distributed at a printers cost price of 25 cents.

Qu'Appelle Valley

The valley of the Qu'Appelle river, originating on the height of land just east of the South Saskatchewan river and some 70 miles northwest of Moose Jaw, swings across the province to the Manitoba border, at several points broadening out into lakes which are the summer playgrounds of thousands of holiday-makers each year.

Several resorts are located on the shores of Long Lake, a body of water approximately 40 miles in length, branching off from the Qu'Appelle Valley almost directly north of Regina.

Saskatchewan Beach, Regina Beach, Beuna Vista and Lumsden Beaches, are well patronized Long Lake resorts, while farther to the east, in the Qu'Appelle Valley, are such popular summer play spots as B-say-tah, Fort Qu'Appelle, Katepwe, Crooked and Round Lakes.

Of the Qu'Appelle Valley country, an eastern Canadian newspaperman has written: "It's beauty unfolds in a friendly way. Its grass and tree-covered slopes fold into an unending series of draws and valleys. Its long and deep lakes call for a bout of quiet fishing in the sun and, all the while, the ear is bent by the calls of one of the greatest concentrations of birds in the country."

WHEN SILENCE SPEAKS

A distinguished clergyman and one of his parishioners were playing golf. It was a very close match, and at the last hole the clergyman teed up, addressed the ball, and swung his driver with great force. The ball, instead of sailing down the fairway, merely rolled off the tee and settled slowly some twelve feet away.

The clergyman frowned, glared and bit his lip, but said nothing. His opponent regarded him for a moment, and then remarked:

"Doctor, that is the most profane silence I have ever witnessed."

POISON IVY CAN BE FATAL

It's A Holiday Scourge That Can Be Avoided

Burning weeds or refuse is a potential ivy menace if you inhale too much smoke. Keep to the windward, as shown in the picture.

By GROVER BRINKMAN
(CPC Correspondent)

Last summer a young university student in a western town spent a weekend cleaning out a long fence-row. The following weekend he raked together the dried brush, vines and weeds, and applied the torch.

Several days later he died.

What had killed him? Poison ivy. He had inhaled enough of the poisonous smoke to so affect his lungs that death resulted.

He wasn't the only person killed by poison ivy in North America last year. True, deaths by poison ivy aren't common. But poison ivy poisoning is common! Each year not hundreds, but thousands—many thousands—are poisoned by ivy. It is called—and rightly so—the scourge of the woods.

Back in 1609, Capt. John Smith wrote: "The poisonous weed . . . being touched causeth redness, itching, and lastly blisters, the which howsoever after a while they pass away of themselves without further harm; yet because for the time they are somewhat painful . . . it hath gotten itself an ill name . . ."

Ill name indeed! Its "leaflets three" can be found all over Canada and the U.S. with the exception of the extreme west coast and the Arctic. Scores of people, normally of the outdoor type, stay out of the woods entirely in summer because of poison ivy and its two cousins, poison oak and poison sumac.

The sap from either of the three will give you a severe itching of the skin that finally ends in blisters before it starts to heal. Since Captain Smith first wrote of it, more than three centuries of scientific progress have failed to eradicate the poisonous ivy, oak and sumac. And today, although more than a thousand treatments have been advocated, none are cures. Medicine can give you little relief from ivy poisoning. Best method is to dry up the sores, keep them from spreading, abstain from scratching.

Poison ivy sufferers start complaining the latter part of May. Last year, more than one-half million persons got a dose of it, some of them pretty stiff doses.

There is no absolute immunity to the poisoning this little three-leafed plant induces. Some people never contact the poisoning, even when the plant is handled. Others get it so easy that merely brushing past a plant does the trick. The poisonous sap is borne in smoke, and even by the wind. A smear on your shoes when dry remains toxic for days, and can be removed only by a strong solvent, such as cleaning fluid.

Dogs transmit ivy poisoning by contact in petting. Changing a tire sometimes does the trick, too.

Old-timers insist that eating the plant itself, either the leaves or the stem, will cause immunity. That's the bunk. Don't do it—it may cause serious illness, even death.

How to avoid ivy poisoning? First, learn to identify the plant on sight. Once you learn to spot poison ivy, you can steer clear of it with ease. Many woods tracts contain little if any ivy. It flourishes in river bottoms, and lowlands, where shade is profuse. Fencerows generally harbor it.

Remember the old phrase, "Leaf-lets three, let them be." No advice is more sound.

Poison ivy is a scourge, but don't let it keep you out of the woods. Just be cautious. Treat it as you would a loaded gun. If you do fall victim to the rash, clip short your fingernails, and keep a stiff upper lip. It's just like having the measles all over again.

Dealing With Wasp Nests

The use of torches to get rid of wasp nests is a dangerous practice that has caused forest fires and resulted in summer cottages being destroyed.

An example of how dangerous the use of fire can be for this purpose was related by a fire control officer:

"Last summer a fuel-wood-cutter was annoyed by a wasps' nest in one of his piles of wood and tried to smoke the creatures out. He succeeded all right, but in so doing, started a fire that not only destroyed thousands of dollars worth of wood but a new truck as well. The arrival of rangers was the only thing that prevented a serious forest fire."

His suggestion for getting rid of wasps, when chemical sprays are not available or for some reason or other are not convenient to do the job was:

"On a damp night, that is one during which the dew has formed, the wasps' nest can be safely picked up on a long stick and carried to a safe place for destruction, such as an incinerator or stove or other means. The principle behind this is that the wasps' wings are damp rendering them incapable of flight and they are able only to crawl about the nest. However, a long stick is essential since the wasps, while unable to fly, can still sting."

Improve Figure By This Exercise

A chest-building routine imitates a swimming stroke. Again stand comfortably, with your feet spread sufficiently wide apart to provide good balance when you begin swinging your arms. Stretch your right arm forward as far as it will go, using an overarm stroke. Then, while you pull it backward through imaginary water, reach forward with your left arm.

Synchronize your strokes, so that one arm is moving forward while the other is retreating. Keep your palms downward as you pull.

Put real force behind your movements if you wish to derive greatest benefits from this workout.

FOR SPORTS ONLY

Excessive wearing of sneakers and flimsy shoes is frowned on by shoe experts who point out that such foot gear is meant only for specialized sports, played on soft ground. For walking, playing and running on hard surfaces, youngsters need the support provided by leather shoes.

VALUABLE FISH

The halibut, one of the most important commercial fish in Canadian waters, frequently reaches six to eight feet in length.

Close To Home Holidays Inexpensive And Entertaining

MIND you we are not suggesting you cancel your reservations immediately, because far away fields are quite green.

But did you ever stop to consider that Canada is a vacation-land paradise to the rest of the world. And you were planning to go away! Chances are you'll find some place much better to go not too far from home.

For instance, if your vacation money permits a trip of about 20 miles we can tell you where to have one of the finest vacations of your life.

Most people when they start to plan a vacation look beyond the first 100 miles, and so pass up beauty spots not to be equalled.

The country's travel charm is apparent to all with eyes. Trouble is, many Canadians have eyes that will not see. To our visitors the country has many different meanings, but each interpretation increases a vacation reputation already great.

Give Canada your attention when planning your holiday this year. You won't be sorry.

Will It Rain?

Here are some almost infallible weather signs:

A gray lowering sunset, or one where the sky is green or yellowish green, indicates rain.

A red sunrise with clouds lowering later in the morning also indicates rain.

A deep blue color of the sky, even when seen through the clouds, indicates fair weather; a growing whiteness an approaching storm.

Fogs indicate settled weather. A morning fog usually breaks away before noon.—Selected. 2941

AN INTERESTING STORY—

WISE GUYS

Nobody Can Say That Old Bill Trimmings Is Unreasonable? ..

By J. ROLFE HUNT

SLIM stood in his used car lot admiring the rows of gleaming autos. He was proud of his reputation as the hardest and smartest dealer in town, if not to say the most honest.

An ancient jalopy crammed with a farmer and his family stopped outside and after disgorging its load turned into the lot. The family disappeared into the department store across the street as the conveyance wheezed to a stop by Slim's side.

"Want to buy a good car, Mister?" the driver asked cheerfully.

"Not my class of trade," Slim replied curtly.

"G'wan, you buy cars, don't you? And this is a darned good old flivver."

"Old is right," Slim said. "I don't want it."

"Well," the farmer drawled, "I'm not an unreasonable man. Nobody can say that Bill Trimmings is unreasonable. Just make me an offer. I figured she was worth all of three hundred."

Slim shrugged. "I'll give you two hundred just to see the back of you. Take it or leave it."

"I'll take it, mister. Nobody can say that old Bill Trimmings is unreasonable."

"OK. Take it to the back and come to the office for the check."

"Heck, I thought you'd put the old girl right out front where everyone could see her," the farmer grinned.

"I'll slip across the road while you're writing it. Mighty fine wife is my Sadie Jane but a bit impatient. I don't like to keep her waiting."

"Must be the trusting type," thought Slim. As he signed the cheque he glanced out of the window and a groan escaped him. "Please," he muttered, "not two hayseeds in one day."

The object of his regard was a weather-beaten old farmer who was solemnly inspecting the cars. Slim watched him as he moved from one to another, kicking the tires.

"Looks as if he's more used to buying mules," Slim thought.

The old farmer worked his way round to the back of the lot until he came to the jalopy left by Bill Trimmings. He kicked the tire with special gusto.

"Interested in the car, sir?" Slim said pleasantly, stepping out.

"Maybe I am," said the man. "You'd be asking a tidy bit for a useful car like this."

Slim managed to keep a straight face. "Only three hundred dollars. That's quite reasonable."

The farmer chewed for a moment in silence. "Pretty fair, son. I'll take it."

Slim smiled. "If you'll just give me your check, you can drive it straight away." He wanted to get the hayseed out of the way before Bill Trimmings got back.

"No check for me, son," the farmer chuckled, leaving. "Joe Collins always deals in cash. I'll go down to the bank and get it for you."

Trimmings now returned, accompanied by a large woman with a determined expression. "Mister," he said nervously, "this is my wife, Sadie Jane. Sadie, this is the man who wants to buy the car."

Sadie sniffed. "Well, get on with it, Bill," she snapped. Bill shuffled his feet. "I... well, we're sorry to have put you to trouble but... well, we're not so certain we want to sell after all."

It was not often that Slim had the chance of making a hundred with so little effort. And now he could feel it slipping away. "Look," he said, "I've written out a check and it's waiting for you. I thought you were satisfied with the price. What's eating you?"

Sadie Jane thrust out her jaw. "Bill had no business to sell without asking me."

"But Sadie, I did..." Bill started to protest.

"Keep quiet," Sadie snapped. "That car's worth two fifty at the very least and I'm not going to let you sell it for a cent less."

Slim ran his fingers through his hair. Collins would be back any minute with the three hundred in cash. "Look," he said. "We're all friends. If the lady feels it's worth an extra fifty... well I'll give it to her just to keep everybody happy."

Sadie looked mollified. Bill opened his mouth. "That's mighty nice of you, mister," he said. "What do you say, Sadie?"

Sadie smiled. "Take the man's check," she said. "He's got a bargain."

Hurriedly, Slim wrote out a fresh check, handed it to Bill who gave it to Sadie for safe keeping and ushered them off the lot.

An hour later, if Slim had been fond of driving down dusty country lanes, he would have seen an old jalopy full of kids and with two farmers in front. Between them sat Sadie Jane. She had just counted out some bills and handed them to the driver. "Here you are, Joe," she said. "You've earned your share of the deal."

But Slim was still waiting for his. (Copyright Wheeler Newspaper Syndicate)

HEALTH

LOCKJAW IS PREVENTABLE BUT STILL CLAIMS LIVES

Tetanus or lockjaw is one of the most serious of the infectious diseases, occurring predominantly among children during the summer months, according to Dr. C. S. Anglin of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, writing in the current issue of Health magazine. The seriousness of tetanus does not lie in the number of children affected, which is fortunately relatively few, but in the agonizing course of the disease and its very high fatality rate.

"A disease which is completely preventable by toxoiding," writes Dr. Anglin, "tetanus should only be of historic interest in these enlightened times. However, each year in every province of Canada, children die from this condition, indicating the need for continued vigilance on the part of health organizations to publicize the necessity of universal immunization."

Tetanus or lockjaw is caused by the poison from a germ which is often found in soil, manure and putrefying material. The micro-organism is frequently normally present in the intestines of horses and other animals which spread the germs in their droppings. It usually enters the body through a site of injury such as that by fireworks, embedded splinters, puncture wounds, insect bites, burns, and compound fractures.

Prevention of tetanus should begin with routine immunization of every infant with tetanus toxoid, which is now usually combined with diphtheria toxoid and whooping cough vaccine. This procedure should be commenced at three to six months of age.

The great-grandson of Sitting Bull, famous Sioux Indian chief, died in the service of the United States in the Korean fighting.

"Swing The Gate"

"Swinging the gate" in tennis is the phrase used to describe the proper way to get your feet into position for a correct forehand or backhand shot. It's an important movement. It is impossible to hit either of these shots effectively without correct foot position.

While waiting for the ball, you should be facing the net with the legs even and the weight distributed equally. If you wish to hit a forehand shot, place your weight on the left leg and swing the right one in a half circle behind you. You should pivot on the ball of the left foot. This will bring you into the correct position sideways to the net to hit a forehand.

Proper position for the backhand is reached by performing the same movement, only swinging the left leg instead of the right. (Both these movements described are for right-handed players. Left handers will reverse the procedure, of course.)

Very few players have what could be described as first-class footwork. Learn to "swing the gate" by practising it until it becomes a habit.

To Serve Well, Toss Well

An old saying in tennis is "To serve well, toss up well." It's one which every player should remember. The key to a well-hit serve is an accurately tossed-up ball.

The chief cause of inaccurate tossing-up is a bent elbow. The way to "groove" your toss is to keep the arm straight at the elbow. This way, you can be certain the ball will go up the same way every time.

Play The Low Bounce

Several times a game every fielder runs into the problem of whether to play the ball to bounce low or bounce high. With so many diamonds not in good shape, the ball is liable to take a sudden hop and strike you in the face if you play it low.

However, research shows that getting set for a ground ball in the expectation that it will bounce high causes many errors. The fielder must learn to get down low enough to play the ball properly. More balls will keep low than will "hop".

If you are a real ball player, you will be more interested in cutting down errors than the possibility of getting hit. Learn to get down to the ball and play it low.

Butter Sponge Cake

Feather-light Butter Sponge Cake, with the orange icing baked on, demands little time but lots of compliments! Try it during the busy house-cleaning days.

Butter Sponge Cake

Two eggs, 1/4 tsp. salt, 1 cup sugar, 1 tsp. vanilla, 1/2 cup milk, 1 tbsp. butter, 1 cup sifted flour, 1 tsp. baking powder, 1 tbsp. grated orange rind, 3 tbsp. sugar.

Beat eggs until very light. Beat in salt, sugar, vanilla. Heat milk and butter to boiling point; add. Sift flour and baking powder; beat in. Bake in greased, 8-inch square cake pan in moderate oven, 350 degrees F., 25 to 30 minutes. When cake is done, sprinkle top with orange rind and sugar, mixed; turn off oven heat; return cake to oven for 5 minutes.

A MOTHER REMEMBERS GOD

It was her first parting. So eagerly The ten-year-old maiden waved merrily
As the bus to the campsite gathered speed—was away,
To a mother smiling bravely, but filled with dismay.
Would this child she had cherished be free from alarm;
Would there be supervisors to keep her from harm;
Would she seek decent shelter through the heat of the day,
And be safe through the storms, and be careful at play?
Then the mother remembered God!
It was so alarming the pain sharp and quick;
The sight of a loved one lying helplessly sick.
After long hours of waiting through the fears of the night
Would the dear eyes not open to see the daylight;
Would the voice now so silent respond as before;
Would the young limbs recover their full strength once more?
For hours she sat watching, so filled with despair;
She yearned o'er her loved one lying listlessly there.
Then the mother remembered God!
It was so hard to conquer, that deep hidden fear
That young steps would wander from the right path, made clear;
That reckless and headstrong she'd go her own way
Unheeding all warning, to rue it some day.
Would she be in good company through gay hours at night;
Would she yield to temptation or do what was right?
The mother, remembering her own youth, sat long
Anxiously wondering if the girl would be strong.
Then the mother remembered God!
Out of her great need there rose a fervent prayer,
Committing this dear one to His great love and care.

ST. PETER'S IS SCENE OF BEATIFICATION—Following beatification ceremonies for Pope Pius XII in St. Peter's Basilica, his holiness Pope Pius XII is shown leading an estimated 200,000 persons in prayer for "true and lasting peace," during veneration of the newly beatified pontiff in St. Peter's Square. The veneration was held in vast St. Peter's Square to enable the pilgrims to participate. Pius, X, was the eighth pontiff to be beatified in the nearly 2,000-year history of the Roman Catholic church and the first in 279 years.—Central Press Canadian.

THINKING TYPEWRITER—This typewriter, demonstrated, to the American Newspaper Publishers Association in New York recently, types the same kind and size of letters as your portable or office typewriter. But electric impulses change these letters into any size, any style of newspaper type and it comes out on photographic film ready for the engraved plate from which the newspaper is printed. It eliminates all type, all type-setters, all linotype machines and all the casting of type.

READY FOR THE ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY DEVELOPMENT—Biggest ship ever made in Canada is nearing completion at the Port Weller dry docks on the Welland ship canal, and will be given trial runs. The S.S. Scott Misener, shown here, is 654 feet long and can carry 20,000 tons of cargo. FEATHERED WOLF—Plagued by a mysterious wolf whistle which greeted her at every turn in the New York office where she is employed, Dorothy Campbell finally called in the police. Intensive investigation produced the real facts of the case. Dorothy's "admirer" was none other than a mynah bird, owned by explorer-hunter Carveth Wells, which now sits jauntily on her knee.

FROM HALIFAX TO PARIS TO LONDON—Benjamin and Elmore Carlin, who crossed the Atlantic in an amphibious jeep, are shown shortly after their arrival in Paris with their weather-battered craft. They started a year ago from Halifax, N.S., crossed the Atlantic to the Azores, thence to Casablanca and Spain and by road to Paris. They plan to stay in Paris for a few weeks and then jeep to London.—Central Press Canadian.

DESIGNED FOR HAZARDOUS TERRAIN—Italian inventor, Count Guido Bonmartini of Rome, is seen in his newest invention—a plane with a new type of landing gear. It is called a "tubular track landing gear" and is somewhat along the same lines as that of a tank track. The inventor, who has already sold the patent rights to Italy and Switzerland, claims that this type of landing gear can land in the most hazardous terrain.

HISTORY REPEATING ITSELF—Among the pleasant surprises for visitors to the Festival of Britain are these "orange girls" in period costumes strolling through the pleasure gardens selling their fruits, sweets and flowers, just as was done in the days of Charles II. The girls are Norma Maden, Hazel Fenton and Ruth Garfield.—Central Press Canadian.

Nutritious Food First Step Towards Health

NUTRITION is by no means a new word, theory or science. Nutrition has been with us since the beginning of time. Our dictionary defines the word Nutrition as: "Act or process of nourishing or of being nourished." So we depend on the food we eat to nourish our bodies and keep us a strong and healthy people. It's really just as simple as that, but how many of us become confused and lose the true significance of the word Nutrition when confronted by the complicated terminology of the technical scientist. In the long run a housewife will do a better job of "nourishing" her family if she will concentrate on buying the right kind of food and using proper methods of preparing and cooking that food.

It is not a difficult job today to plan menus which include the proper foods. There is much in the way of information on this subject, and plain common sense is perhaps the best guide in feeding a family. If we do not eat the right food we can not expect to be well and strong or equal to the responsibility we carry. No one considers good food a "cure-all" by any means, but it will protect our bodies against the development of many diseases. It is easy to form the habit of eating the right foods at the right time and with very little effort you will acquaint yourself with such foods. Throughout life we work so persistently and so hard for goals which, without our health and strength, can mean nothing when attained. How much time do you spend figuring out what, and how, and when you should feed your body each day? Medical records seem to make it fairly obvious that very little time or thought is consumed in answering those questions.

Food must look good, taste good and be good if we are to make our families food-conscious, so that they too will realize that the body can not function properly without its quota of proteins, fats, carbohydrates, vitamins, minerals and water. These are the constituents of all good food.

According to government nutritionists, the essential foods may be divided into seven basic groups. They are:

Group One—Green and yellow vegetables, raw, cooked, frozen or canned.

Group Two—Oranges, tomatoes, grapefruit or raw cabbage or salad green.

Group Three—Potatoes and other vegetables and fruits, raw, dried, cooked, frozen or canned.

Group Four—Milk and milk products, fluid, evaporated and dried, or cheese.

Group Five—Meat, poultry, fish or eggs, beans, peas, nuts and nut products.

Group Six—Bread, flour and cereals, natural whole grain or enriched.

Group Seven—Butter.
Eat something from each of these groups every day if possible. Sometimes these rules are interpreted as a Nutrition Menu Pattern. It is suggested that you eat every day:

Meat, Fish or Poultry—One or more servings.

Beans and Nuts—Include these when meat is not served.

Milk and Cheese—One pint of milk for adults, more for children.

Eggs—One a day, if possible, or a minimum of four per week.

Potatoes—One or more servings. Irish or sweet.

Vegetables—Two servings of green and yellow varieties.

Fruits—One serving of citrus or tomatoes, and second serving of other fruit.

Bread and Cereal—Four slices of whole grain or enriched bread, and serving of cereal.

Butter—Two or three tablespoons or more.

Vegetable and Cheese Casserole

1 cup vegetable (cooked or canned), 1½ cups hot milk, 1 cup bread-crumbs, ¼ cup melted fat, 1½ tbs. onion, 1½ cups old cheese, few grains pepper, few grains paprika, 3 eggs, 1½ tbs. parsley.

Pour hot milk over crumbs and add fat, parsley, onion, grated cheese and seasonings. Add beaten eggs. Put vegetables into greased casserole and pour mixture over them. Bake 45 minutes in electric oven at 350 degrees. Serves 6.

Eggs On The Square

Six square slices spiced or boiled ham (1 pound). 6 slices bread, ½ inch thick, ½ cup sweet pickle relish, 6 eggs, salt and pepper.

Place slices of meat in a shallow pan. Trim off bread crusts so that the bread is the same size as the meat. Cut out the centres of the bread with a biscuit cutter; place bread slices on top of meat. Sprinkle sweet pickle relish in the hollows. Drop an egg into each hollow. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Broil under low heat until egg sets and toast is golden brown, about 5-7 minutes. Serve immediately.

Hot Liver With Peas

One pound liver sausage, 1½ cups medium white sauce, 1½ cups cooked peas, ½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, 1½ pounds cooked new potatoes in jackets.

Slice liver sausage; broil about 5 minutes, or until hot and browned. Combine white sauce, peas and Worcestershire sauce; heat. Arrange liver sausage slices around outside of serving plate; pour creamed peas on slices. Pile potatoes in centre.

Creamed Chipped Beef

Two tablespoons flour, 1 cup water, 1 cup evaporated milk, ¼ pound dried beef, 18 half slices bread, toasted.

Stir water slowly into flour to keep smooth. Bring mixture to a boil, stirring constantly to prevent lumping. Add milk and continue cooking over boiling water until thickened, stirring occasionally. If dried beef is very salty, cover with boiling water for five minutes, then drain. Pull beef into small pieces, discarding fat and stringy portions. Heat beef in sauce. Serve over hot toast, allowing three half slices per person. Good served over mashed potatoes, rice or noodles, too.

—O—

Garden Salad Bowl

One cup cooked peas, ½ cup chopped celery, ½ cup French dressing, ¼ pound sliced cold meat (ham, liver sausage, bologna, salami, etc.), prepared mustard, 1 cup cottage cheese, 1 green pepper or ¼ cup chopped chives or parsley, 1 cucumber, 2 carrots, lettuce, mayonnaise.

Combine peas and celery; marinate 15 minutes in French dressing. Roll up cold meat slices, fasten with toothpicks. Combine cottage cheese and green pepper. Score cucumber; slice. Grate carrots. Arrange lettuce in salad bowl. On one side of bowl place meat roll-ups. In individual lettuce cups place cottage cheese; peas and celery; cucumber slices and carrot. Serve with mayonnaise.

Do You Think Fish Are Guided By "Radar" — Read This

Do fish have a type of radar system which warns them of obstacles in their path, or reports the presence of food in the water? Hundreds of veteran fishermen will believe this is the most fantastic fish yarn of all time. But some of the leading biologists in Canada and the United States, where extensive studies on this phase of piscatorial activity have been, and are being carried out, are of a like opinion.

There seems little doubt that all fish, from the sluggish sturgeon to the speedy speckled trout, receive mysterious impulses which tell them of dangerous obstructions to their progress—or the presence of food. Whether they "send" impulses which rebound from rocks and other obstacles somewhat as do radar "waves", is something on which it is hard to speculate.

There is a lateral line running along the side of every fish. Without question, there are small holes or grooves running on these lateral lines, which do connect with a canal which leads, in turn, to the inner ear—and brain—of the fish.

The lateral line receives and interprets vibration in the water, which is what radar is in principle. The fish does have a receiving apparatus for arbitrary stimuli. In other words, the lateral line operates hearing and touch—and the only kind of stimuli of which we know are vibrations of low frequency; frequency much lower than sound.

Studies of speckled trout and salmon, both regarded as "fast water" fish, have shown that when one of this type seeks the lee side of a rock in running water, in some mysterious way he "tunes in" to the vibrations caused by water passing over each side of the rock. Actually, the fish swims a beam, just as an airplane pilot flies equidistant between the "A" and "N" sounds of a radio beam.

For the unskilled in biology, he suggested the examination of fish scales taken from the lateral line under a microscope will quickly reveal the presence of the holes or grooves which are, he believes, at least the "receiving" side of the piscatorial radar.

HONESTY

I hope I shall always possess firmness and virtue enough to maintain what I consider the most enviable of all titles, the character of an "Honest Man".—George Washington.

Fear of punishment never made man truly honest. Moral courage is requisite to meet the wrong and to proclaim the right. — Mary Baker Eddy.

Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things.

—Philippians.

There is no terror in your threats; for I am armed so strong in honesty that they pass me by as the idle wind.—Shakespeare.

We must make the world honest before we can honestly say to our children that honesty is the best policy.—Bernard Shaw.

Do not consider anything for your interest which makes you break your word, quit your modesty, or inclines you to any practice which will not bear the light, or look the world in the face.—Marcus Antoninus.

TRY AND STOP ME!

By BENNETT CERF

Jonathon Daniels probably covered a thousand classics of the track during his newspaper career, but none of them made the impression on him occasioned by a race between five camels at a Carolina carnival early in the century. Nobody remembers who persuaded the owners of the five camels to stage the race, but the first thing anybody knew, people began to bet on the outcome.

Perplexed bookies established initial odds of four to one against all five camels, but just before the race 40 many big bets were planked down on the one named Ben Ali—all of them, apparently, made by the five Arab owners—that the bookies grew suspicious and refused further bets. What's more, they watched the race with eagle eye for any sign of dirty work.

The race, to all intents and purposes, however, was fairly run. All five Arab owners pressed their mounts with equal fervor and determination, and when Ben Ali won easily, the bookies could find no excuse for withholding payment to the winners. One of them, his exchequer badly depleted, asked the Arab who had finished third, "What made all you birds bet everything on Ben Ali?"

The Arab explained, with a grin, "Mister, Ben Ali is what is known in our country as a bell camel. From the day of their birth, camels are taught to follow the bell camel!"

EIGHT FEET TALL, STILL GROWING—Elizabeth Sanchez, who is four years old, is looking with understandable awe at towering Felipe Birrier, who at the age of 22 is eight feet, two inches tall. Felipe left Puerto Rico hoping to find a job with a circus. He had to have a job fast to support his appetite. To give you an idea: For breakfast he consumes 17 pork chops, two dozen eggs, two quarts of milk and two loaves of bread. Doctors say that Felipe will grow until he is 30 or 35 and may reach an altitude of ten feet. He didn't have to look for the circus job. He was snapped up immediately by a Puerto Rican theatre in New York.—Central Press Canadian.

POISON IVY CONTROL

Canadians plagued with poison ivy in their orchards, gardens and backyards can easily eradicate it by spraying with the chemical, ammonium sulfamate ("Ammate") at the rate of one pound in every gallon of water. This amount is enough for about 100 square feet. Care should be taken that the spray does not touch useful plants and shrubs, as it will destroy them as well.

THE BIRDS HAVE NOTHING ON HIM! — Sergeant-major of the French air force, Leo Valentin is shown displaying the wings, made of plywood, with which he hopes to soar over Italy. In competition with Italian birdmen, Valentin will drop from a helicopter at an altitude of 10,000 feet. Winner of the event will be the one who stays in the air longest.

On The Side : By E. V. Durling

One restaurant chain desiring to have its waitresses as streamlined as possible is staging a weight reduction campaign for its tray queens with the slogan: "Slimmer the hips, the better the tips." As far as I am concerned, I don't care whether a waitress has slim hips or not. It is the rapid and pleasant service that counts. It is also a fact that plump waitresses are usually much less easily irritated than the slender girls.

Osculation And Longevity

The claim that kissing shortens life has been revived. This time by a Boston man of science. He says "a normal kiss" decreases a person's life by three minutes. That such a kiss raises the heartbeat from 72 to 95. This claim is difficult to check as no explanation is given as to what is meant by a "normal kiss". Furthermore, it seems the type of people cooperating in the osculation would be a factor. A kiss from a school teacher or a registered nurse would certainly not raise the heartbeat as much as one from a ravishing red-head, a gorgeous brunette or a beautiful blonde. The man of science aforementioned states "a passionate kiss" decreases the life of the kissers five minutes.

Cure For A Complex

Most women suffer from an inferiority complex. So claims a feminine subscriber. She says one of the major reasons for this sad situation is that the male is always depicted as "a superior being". He always comes first. The lady believes things would be different if the minister said: "I pronounce you woman and husband," and asked the man if he promised to love, honor and obey his wife. Or if newspaper items read: "Mrs. Mary Jane Smith and her husband John." Or if the constitution were altered to read: "All women and men are created free and equal." That's a quaint idea. Recalls another feminine subscriber who once claimed some popular songs had a tendency to give a wife an inferiority complex. As for example: "I love my wife, but, oh you kid." She said there should have been a sequel to that called: "I love my husband, but, oh you tall, tan and terrific dream man." Also, that following the ditty: "My wife's gone to the country, hooray! hooray!" There should have been one called: "My husband's gone on a business trip, hooray! hooray!"

They're Not Fooling

In Sweden if a man has had only one drink he stands a chance of being arrested as a drunk driver. In that country it is not a question whether a reckless driver is inebriated. If a medical examination shows he has even the slightest trace of alcohol in his system, he is charged with being guilty of driving an automobile in an unfit condition. The penalty for this is a jail sentence. Yes, sir, even if a fellow had only one glass of beer, it could result in his being jailed. Keep that in mind if you ever are touring through Sweden by automobile.

(By Francis James)

Dear Miss James:

We recently moved into a very small bungalow with a combination living and dining room (separated by an archway) and a kitchen opening off the part we use as a dining room. We have given the living and dining rooms the same treatment with pale gray walls and curtains throughout (there are two large windows in each section) in chintz with a pale green background and pattern in coral, rose and wine. Since the kitchen is so obvious from the dining end of the room, we're wondering if we should do it in the same colors as the living-dining room. We had even thought of putting the same chintz on the window. Do you think this would be suitable? Any suggestions for a color scheme for the kitchen would be greatly appreciated.—Mrs. L. R.

Dear Mrs. L. R.:

Your idea of blending kitchen colors with those of living-dining room is excellent. But, frankly the use of the chintz at the window would be unwise. For one thing, it would not be practical—steam and smoke would soon take its toll, and unless the chintz were washable, you might find that you were under considerable dry-cleaning expense to keep it presentable. And even if it were washable, chintz will not stand up indefinitely under frequent wear and tear by the washing machine.

Neither would I suggest that you match your kitchen walls to the pale gray of the living and dining rooms. This cool color in conjunction with the stark white of refrigerator, stove and sink might make the overall effect pretty cold and dreary. The pale green would be good for the walls if your kitchen is bright and sunny. Or, if it needs warmth, try a warm coral.

The main pattern interest could be in your ceiling. Find a wallpaper combining the green, coral and wine of the living-dining room chintz. If you have used green on your walls, any built-in cupboards, etc., could be painted coral on the outside, deep green on the inside. If you have used coral on the walls, cupboards could be painted green on the outside, deep coral on the inside.

If you have open cupboards, line them with the wallpaper you have used on the ceiling. At the window use a double ruffle in coral or green—depending on which of these two colors you have chosen for the inside of your built-in cupboards.

Brushes used for water paints should be cleaned in water.

All brushes, after they have been cleaned with the recommended solvent, should be washed with the solution of mild soap and water, and wrapped as outlined above.

Be careful never to clean your brushes near a flame or open fire. Neglected brushes can be softened and re-conditioned with specially prepared cleaners, obtainable at your hardware dealer or paint store.

When a brush is brand new, all short loose bristles and dust should be worked out before it is used. New varnish brushes may be best washed in some inexpensive thinner before being put into varnish. This will remove any foreign particles that might mar the varnish coat. A new brush should first be dipped in the paint to a depth of two or three inches and wiped across the edge with the mixing paddle several times to work the paint well into its clean bristles.

Children Running In A
Pack Could Be As Dangerous As Wild Dogs

By WANDA MOORE

MR. DERRICK knew that he had been born two hundred years too late. He could have been a pirate. He would have liked that. Sailing the bounding main. Being the terror of the sea. Yo ho and an extra heave!

He sighed. He glared at the children sitting at their desks in front of him. He'd have made every last one of them walk the plank. That he would. Joe there, wiping his nose on his sleeve. Clarence, sitting bolt upright sound asleep. Natalie, sitting through her teeth at Donald, trying to attract his attention to a possible note.

He brought his fist down on the desk, and repeated the performance until the bright red apple at the far corner leaped two inches into the air.

"Attention!" he bellowed, and was slightly mollified when he saw the children start in their seats and Clarence's lids swing away from startled eyes. "How many have finished their arithmetic?" he asked, knowing full well that not even he with years of school teaching behind him could have finished the problems in that length of time.

Not a hand raised. Natalie put on her dear-teacher smile. "They are awfully hard, Mr. Derrick. I just got two done yet."

"What were you doing?" he asked, leaning the words on his sarcasm, "trying to get Donald to work them for you?"

Quick tears sprang to her eyes.

"Why, Mr. Derrick, you know I wouldn't cheat."

Out of the corner of his eye, he saw Donald's angry frown and the bunching of his fists. He turned, eager for verbal combat, but was interrupted by Clarence. "I didn't finish them. They finished me." He yawned loudly.

A titter became a laugh. The laugh grew out of all proportion to the cause.

"Silence!" he roared. The composite laugh roared right back at him. "Silence!" he banged his desk. "I'd rather be a pig herder than be teaching a bunch of dumbbells like you."

The laugh stopped, leaving mouths wide. Hurt eyes stared at him from each still face. "Oh, Mr. Derrick," Natalie whispered, as tears flowed down her face.

Oh, Mr. Derrick. The words echoed in his heart. Taking it out on children because he was unhappy. He hit the desk with his hand, but the apple did not even tremble. "Class dismissed for recess." The roar was gone from his voice.

The children did not stop to be surprised at the new recess time. They scurried out the door, shoving each other in their eagerness to be gone.

He dropped his head in his hands. They would dislike him more than ever now. He had felt their reserved acceptance of him when he had come to this country school only a few months ago. They had all been behind in their work. Discipline had been non-existent. He had clamped down hard and verbally whipped them into shape. He had done a good job with iron words, but somewhere along the way, he had lost his touch with children. He had nothing left to give them but discipline.

Discipline! The word was bitter in his mouth. Ten years as vice-principal in a city school. Then failing health. Country air needed. Solving his problem smartly by accepting a post in a country school where the children needed a good teacher to bring them out of the funk in which the last teacher had left them. What would the school board think of their good teacher now by the time the children and their parents got done with him?

Then he realized there was no laughter and shouting on the school ground. Had the children gone home? Hiking the miles. Not even waiting for the school bus.

Slowly, he raised his face from his hands. He looked out the window.

The children were gathered in a tight group at the far corner of the playground. He could see their mouths move, but he heard no sound. Their arms waved. Their heads bobbed.

Suddenly, they turned as one. With Natalie leading, the close group started toward the school house. Unsmiling faces and quick steps.

Mr. Derrick felt drops of cold sweat gather on his forehead. What were they going to do? They were just children, but children running in a pack could be as dangerous as wild dogs.

He tried to rise from his chair, but he felt his heart pounding. This would be a fine time to have his heart act up, he thought sarcastically. He remained in his seat, holding the edge of the desk with tight hands.

Natalie entered. The children crowded in after her. They marched down the aisles together and stopped in front of his desk.

He tried to speak. No words came.

The children crowded close in back of Natalie, as she placed an appreciable pile of small change on the desk. She smiled her dear-teacher smile. "Mr. Derrick," she said, "we know you are sick. Sick people say things they don't mean. We thought,"

FUTURE CHOPIN?—Almost too shy to climb up on the piano bench, 3-year-old Brenda Pollard, of Keswick, Ont., includes among her repertoire some three dozen piano selections, including part of Haydn's first symphony. Playing entirely by ear the talented child has amazed even her mother, a music teacher.

She indicated the pile of money, "we would help you take a couple of weeks vacation to get well. Then you would like us again."

Slowly, Mr. Derrick picked up the money. Then he set it back on the desk. Digging in his pocket, he placed an equal pile of change beside the first one.

A trace of his buccaneer spirit entered his smile. He leaned toward the serious faces. "We will have a picnic lunch. The whole works." (Copyright Wheeler Newspaper Syndicate)

Milk Drinks For Child Health

Popular Way Of Serving Fourth Glass Of The Day

Milk is one of the most economical sources of nutrition for your growing children. A quart a day furnishes the amount of calcium needed for a child daily, as well as other important nutrients. Like all dairy foods milk is an essential part of the child's diet.

Give the child a glass at each meal. The fourth glass (to make up the quart) can be served in cooked foods or after school in popular milk drinks.

Caramel Milk Shake

Four cups milk, pinch salt, 4 tablespoons caramel syrup, vanilla ice cream or whipped cream.

Combine all ingredients and shake vigorously. Serve cold with a spoonful of vanilla ice cream or hot with a spoonful of whipped cream.

To make caramel syrup: Dissolve 2 cups sugar in ½ cup water (preferably in an aluminum pan). Cover and boil rapidly until syrup thickens. Remove cover and cook over low heat until syrup is amber color. Remove from heat and slowly add one cup boiling water.

Return to heat and continue to cook over low heat until caramel melts (about 3 or 4 minutes). Makes about 1½ cups. Store in a tightly covered jar in a cool place.

Milk 'n' Honey

Four cups milk, 6 tablespoons honey, pinch salt, 2 eggs, well beaten.

Add milk, honey and salt to beaten eggs. Shake well and serve.

Chocolate Whip

Two squares bitter chocolate, 1 cup hot water, ½ cup sugar, 5 cups milk, ¼ teaspoon vanilla, 1 egg white, 2 tablespoons sugar.

Melt chocolate in top of double boiler. Add hot water and cook over direct heat until slightly thickened, stirring constantly. Add sugar and milk. Return to bottom half of double boiler and allow to cook 5 minutes longer, chill.

Beat egg white until stiff. Gradually add sugar and continue beating until stiff and dry. Add vanilla. Fold beaten egg white into chilled chocolate milk mixture just before pouring into individual glasses.

Make Your Vacation A Pleasure For Tiny Tots, Too

IF YOU ever tried sitting down in the family car with your head below window level you'd find it was dreadful. You feel as if you are being hurtled through space which gives you a sick feeling in your stomach.

Well that's just how little two to five year olds feel. Is it any wonder he stands on the seat or stands on the floor and leans dangerously against the door, no matter how many times you tell him to sit down. To make the trip a pleasure to him and much more enjoyable to all the adults, make a seat for him. Pad a small wooden box (a small orange crate is about the right size) all over with heavy goods, make sure corners are covered so they won't scratch the car seats, then cover it all with cretonne or leatherette.

This will fit on the back seat and stay on so the child can sit up and look out the window or it can be placed between two people on the front seat and the little passenger can see ahead without being held on someone's lap.

It is also useful in a cafe to let the child eat a meal or ice cream with his head well above the table. We wouldn't enjoy our meal if the table was even with our mouth.

Make a child's comfy seat before you take another drive and see if the trip isn't more enjoyable for everybody.

Funny and Otherwise

Lawyer (paternally, to client anxious for divorce): "My dear young lady, occasional tiffs are bound to occur in your married life. But think of the joy to be got out of it."

Client: "Exactly. Get me out of it."

Doctor: I can't find any cause for your trouble, I think it's due to drinking.

Patient: Well, maybe I'd better come back some time when you're sober.

A farmer, paying his first visit to the seashore, asked a boatman if he could buy some of the water to take home to show his wife.

The boatman assented and charged the farmer a quarter.

A few hours later the visitor returned to the shore. By now the tide had gone out, and the man gazed open-mouthed at the spectacle.

"By gosh, mister," he said, "you've done a good business today."

The inspector of tenement houses found four families living in one room. Chalk marks quartered the room for each family.

"How you been getting along here?" he asked.

"Pretty good," was the reply, "until the old lady in the corner began to take in boarders."

"I'm a very busy man, sir. What is your proposition?"

"I want to make you rich."

"Well, leave your recipe with me and I'll look it over later. Just now I'm engaged in closing a deal where I can make seven dollars in real money."

Judge: Are you sure this man was drunk?

Officer: Well, your honor, he was carrying a manhole cover, and said he was going home to play it on his phonograph.

"Yes, we went to see Niagara. What power there is in those Falls! My wife couldn't speak for nearly a minute."

"A man may have many friends, but he will find none so steadfast, so constant, so ready to respond to his wants, so capable of pushing him ahead, as a little leather covered book with the name of a bank on its cover."

The psychologist explained how easy it was to judge a man's character from his clothes.

"Socks show a man's temperament very clearly. They tell whether he is generous or avaricious, nervous or phlegmatic," he announced.

"They also keep his feet warm," muttered an unbeliever.

Tip For Anglers

PRINCE ALBERT.—Sport fishing on Last Mountain Lake is five times better at Etter's Beach, near the north end, than it is at Regina Beach, near the southern tip, according to a report compiled by the Saskatchewan fisheries branch.

The report, based on a creel census carried out on the lake last year, explained that this was due to the fact that angling pressure, in the past, had been exerted almost entirely on the southern part of the lake. At the north end, there has been comparatively little sport fishing to date, and there, the report says, anglers can expect to find "really good fishing".

The Automobile

We don't think of the automobile as an enemy—we think it is one of the signs of progress which has done so much for 20th century civilization.

But an American statistician has figured it out that automobiles kill people faster than wars. He says that, in the first nine months of the war in Korea 9,600 American lives were lost. In the same period from June 25, 1950, to March 25, 1951, automobiles on the American home front have killed 28,400 people. Automobiles kill three times as fast as wars, according to these figures.

It's a sad commentary on progress that is found in these figures.—Lethbridge Herald.

The great-grandson of Sitting Bull, famous Sioux Indian chief, died in the service of the United States in the Korean fighting.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear son, Frankie Douglas Pierson, who died July 17, 1950.

Quick and sudden was the call,
His sudden death surprised us all
Only those who lost can tell
The pain of parting without farewell.

For all of us he did his best,
May God grant him eternal rest.

He was always smiling, always content,
Loved and respected wherever he went,

Always so good, unselfish and kind,

What a beautiful memory he left behind.

So sadly missed by Mummy and Daddy
